The Scholarship Decision Process

As chair of the Faculty Financial Aid and Scholarship Committee, I would like to outline the process of selecting scholarship recipients at AASU.

The freshman scholarship applications are due on March 1.

The application consists of basic student information and includes a place for students to express their need and desire for scholarship funds. Approximately two weeks after the due date, the scholarship committee meets to review the applications. Approximately ten faculty members make up this committee. The committee evaluates the applications and makes a list of the 10-15 best candidates at each student academic level. The number of candidates fluctuates based on the funds available each year. The committee also makes a ranked list of alternate candidates. Students on the original list are notified by U.S. mail and their AASU e-mail account of their selection for a scholarship. Notification is never made by phone. Please note that one's response to a scholarship offer is deadline sensitive. Students on the alternate list are notified only if a student on the original list declines the scholarship or fails to return all paperwork by the deadline set forth in the award letter. Students who are not selected are not notified.

In reviewing the applications the committee considers many factors including academic achievements, GPA, SAT scores, extracurricular activities, financial need, and the applicant's statement. The statement is evaluated for its message, organization, grammar, and demeanor. Be sure to take your time and check your spelling. Students need to take this information into consideration when completing the scholarship application.

The scholarship process is the same for returning and transfer students except these student applications are due on May 1. The committee makes a set number of awards (it changes every year based on funding) per class level (sophomore, junior, senior, graduate) and a special set of awards for non-traditional students (i.e. those returning for education leading to a second career).

The Office of Financial Aid is responsible for collecting the scholarship applications and notifying the award recipients. However, it is not responsible for selecting the recipients of the scholarships.

Best Wishes!
 Pamela Z. Sears
