Consultation is available

If you have concerns about a student, contact the

Consultation is available

When you make an initial contact, you ask:

1. What is the student doing?
2. What have you heard about the student?
3. What is the problem you need to know about?
4. How will you help the student deal with the problem?

After determining the nature of the situation:

1. Have you seen the student in the past?
2. What is your knowledge of the student's past?
3. How does the student feel about it?
4. What is the student's solution to the problem?

Describe the situation:

The situation:

4) They're unhappy to make a report.
3) They're being forced to make a report.
2) They're being pressured to make a report.
1) They're happy to make a report.

What can you do to help:

1. Encourage them to make a report.
2. Provide them with the necessary information.
3. Help them understand the consequences of not making a report.
4. Support them in making a report.

What you can do to help:

1. Provide emotional support.
2. Help them understand the gravity of the situation.
3. Assist them in identifying potential solutions.
4. Encourage them to seek assistance from relevant authorities.

When you make a report:

1. Provide evidence of the situation.
2. Ensure that the report is made in a timely manner.
3. Follow up on the situation to ensure it is addressed.
4. Provide support to the student during the process.

When you make a report:

1. The situation may involve a legal or ethical issue.
2. The report should be made to the appropriate authorities.
3. The report should be made in a timely manner.
4. The report should be made with the student's consent.

If you have any concerns about a student, contact the school counselor or school psychologist.