DAVID GRIFFIN, JUROR

David Griffin is a working artist and museum professional. He is Director of Collections and Exhibitions at the Albany Museum of Art in Albany, Georgia, the area’s only nationally accredited art museum in the region. Griffin has been working in the Albany Museum in some capacity since his original internship position eight years ago. The main areas of interest for his conceptual artwork are multilayering mixed media compositions within graphite and polyurethane drawings and in sculptural ceramics. He has exhibited in numerous juried and solo exhibitions in the southeast and his work was also part of the state university system’s art and culture exchange with China in 2014.

Griffin graduated from Georgia Southwestern State University in 2008 with a BFA in sculpture and ceramics. Before taking his current full-time position with the Albany Museum, he worked in the Georgia Public School System in the Special Education Department. He is currently pursuing an MA in contemporary art history and theory from Azusa Pacific University.
